“Yes, [the Syrian refugee crisis] is very complex. But people are dying and that’s not complex. People need help and that’s not complex.”

— Lavinia Limón
President and CEO

2015 was a low point for humanity – the world inadequately responded to the ongoing global refugee crisis.

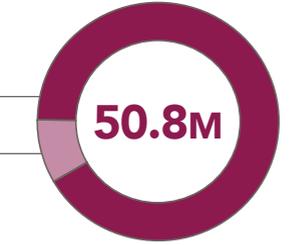

We did not waver in championing our cause. Instead, we took the lead to educate decision makers and advocate for what was right. We expanded our reach through partnerships to build local communities of opportunity and demand a global standard of dignity for the uprooted. We renewed our energy with a refreshed brand and a new web presence to harness the courage of our supporters and tell the inspirational stories of the people we serve. No matter the state of the world, we will continue to insist that everyone, everywhere, has equal value.
